(9) Provide two copies of the command's mobilization plan to HQDA, DCSOPS, ATTN: DAMO-ODM for review not later than 120 days following publication of AMOPES.

5. Concept

a. In general, AMOPES provides a framework for mobilization and operations planning and execution, using current capabilities (operations without mobilization), expanded capabilities through the various levels of mobilization (PSRC, partial, full, and total mobilization), and during reconstitution of forces.

b. AMOPES provides a source document for issuing policies, procedures, guidance, and planning assumptions for the functional areas of training, exercises, mobilization, deployment, employment, sustainment, expansion of forces beyond the approved force structure, redeployment, demobilization and reconstitution of Army forces.

c. AMOPES supports joint military capabilities and operations planning under the Joint Strategic Capabilities Plan (JSCP), the Joint Operations Planning and Execution System (JOPES), the Department of Defense (DOD) Master Mobilization Plan (MMP), and the DOD Defense Planning Guidance (DPG) and is in concert with FM 100-17, FM 100-19, FM 100-22 and FM 100-23.

d. AMOPES also performs the following functions:

(1) It provides the procedures and guidance necessary to plan and execute Army support to contingency operations and approved operation plans.

(2) It consolidates Army policies, procedures and plans in terms of development, coordination, dissemination, review and approval of mobilization plans.

(3) It documents planning and execution policy and guidance in OPLAN format, using functional annexes and appendices. This policy and guidance is provided both for operations without the involuntary call-up of reserve forces and for operations requiring involuntary call-up/mobilization. It also documents detailed policy and guidance for crisis response, demobilization, survival, recovery and reconstitution of the Army. In the event of a global threat, it provides policy and guidance for total mobilization in a concept form.

6. Objectives

a. To ensure the Army plans and executes actions necessary to provide the forces and resources to meet requirements of the combatant commanders. These requirements may stem from contingency operations or approved operation plans under pre-mobilization and post-mobilization conditions.

b. To ensure the Army establishes and executes mobilization of reserve component units in a predetermined systematic manner.

(c) To ensure the Army has a forum for periodic mobilization reviews to focus and where possible, to improve Army capability to mobilize and deploy its forces. These reviews guide continued development and improvement of AMOPES and UDDS.

7. Unit Deployment Designator System

The UDDS is an umbrella system that integrates DoD policy guidance, from the Bottom-Up-Review (BUR) and the strategy objectives in the JSCP, with the training doctrine and readiness criteria essential to the integration of Army Reserve Component with Active Component for contingencies. It clarifies the amount of post-mobilization training time programmed for respective RC units. It helps prioritize unit training requirements following mobilization. It assists in the peacetime allocation of scarce resources. Furthermore, it assists in ensuring that regional OPLANS are anchored to valid alignments and assumptions (as provided under Title XI), about unit availability, training, readiness, accurate mobilization dates and post-mobilization training with respect to Army RC units. UDDS plays a very important role in OPLANs approved by the Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff (CJCS), DA Master Priority List (DAMPL), AR 220-1, AR 500-5, AR 11-30 , AMOPES Annex C (Operations) and AR 700-140.
